One of the Very Richest Mining Regions

Of the Pacific Slope—Some Account of

New Figure.

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.]

TOMBSTONE, ARIZONA, August 14, 1889.

The Grand Central hoisting-works were not visited by me. They are reputed to be the finest south of Bodie, and equal to any on the Pacific Coast outside of the Comstock. The main shaft descends 640 feet below the floor, and runs fifty-four feet above. There are two compartments four by five feet in the clear for hoisting, and a pump-shaft five by seven feet, with boilers and hoisting engines of mammoth size and great power.

My next visit with Mr. Leach men of the Grand Central mine, and its accomplished wife, added greatly to the interest of my investigations. These ladies have even fertile Arizona produce luxuriant flowers at their 0320.

In addition to the mines visited the following mines are being actively worked:

The Empire, immediately north of the Tranquillity, produces a large amount of good ore. The Way Up, producing the best manure, is considered the best of the bonanza properties. The Middle Age is as notorious, for the twain connected with it, as Mark Twain's book of that name is famous. The latter is a very poor specimen of the celebrated combination ore-body which intruded into the Goodenough and Vir-

Leaving the town again and commencing at a distance of one mile south, we come to the Old Guard mine, which is a part of the same tract; hence continuing south to the next promise; thence continuing south we come to the noted Kentucky Cuss, Dick Gird and the Schiefelins' boys' first venture, which produced $400,000 in gold and silver. The Schiefelins of the Corbin brothers, however, in its consolidation with the Ambrose Mill and Mining Company. The next mine is the Owls' Last-Hoot, two rods of the Gird and Schiefelins boys' properties, now owned by the Tombstone M. & M. Co. The next one is the

The Arizona Smelting and Reduction company—a mine for which they paid $100,000 last December. It is now producing—leading the world in high-grade copper, which is reduced to the metropolitan twenty-stamp mill at the San Pedro river, two miles below Charleston, from which they shipped 1,400 tons of copper in 1892, at $8.402-20 the bullion averaging 99.9 per cent fine.

These going to the west about one half of the haul, and the rest to the Ben Hur mine, developed within the last six months to the rank of a first-class mine. Between the Randolph mine and Charleston, upon the east side of the Colorado, is a fine network of a net network of mining locations, many of them of great intrinsic merit. About 10 miles from Charleston, and seven miles from the mouth of the above-mentioned mine, upon which Mr. Brown and his wife, the locator, lost his life—murdered by Mexicans—which event was followed by the murder of twelve men, either by the same Mexicans, or contestants for the property, the title of which is to-day in litigation.

 In addition to those referred to are a large number of other undeveloped mines, and valuable claims, too numerous to mention.

This is a grand showing, and demonstrates better than mere words the wonderful development of this district in the output of paper and pulp. It already ranks next to the American Game-Bird Shooting—A Golden Eagle—Angling for Peck and a Boy of the Forest—Sporting Notes.

THE STORMY EVENING.

Let them sing, they will, the pleasures that they give;

In the heart that receives, and the heart of the giver;

But give me the wild and untrammelled joy that thrills through my veins by the mountain and river.

There are for the hills, for the sun-drenched hills,

For the days that grow weary never, the blue sky is over me,

The world is before me, and my heart is singing forever.

No sighing at my heart's profound for me, no lullaby's mine, no lullaby's mine,

But the heights of the mountains, the moon-ventured hills,

And the land where the red deer is browsing, the sun-drenched hills,

For the days that grow weary never, the blue sky is over me,

The world is before me, and my heart is singing forever.

AMERICAN GAME-BIRD SHOOTING.

The Orange Judd Company, of New York, has just published a book, by John Mortimer Murphy, with the above title.

Mr. Murphy has devoted a large portion of his life to the study of all game indigenous to Canada and the United States, whether fur, fin or feather.

He spent seven years in wandering through the wilds of the West and Southwest, studying their flora and fauna, and seeking the stirring adventures which are so congenial to his nature.

He has hunted and fished with some of the leading sportsmen of this country and British America, and frequently accompanied Indian tribes on their hunting and fishing expeditions, so that he is thoroughly acquainted with the various methods employed by the red men for capturing game.

His work on game birds is written entirely from a sportsman's standpoint, being intended to not only describe their habits and habits, but also the various methods employed in their capture, and Europe for field and covert work, the proper charges for guns, the different methods for luring turkeys and wild fowl within range, camp cooking, life in the wild-ness, the pains and pleasures of a sportsman's existence, and unique characters, half hunter and half stock-raiser or farmer to be met with on the borders of civilization, and the majestic and wonderful scenery of the far West.

A GOLDEN EAGLE.

On the 21st inst. Joseph Shiro, while gunning on the Moore ranch, his eye attracted by a rare bird, of majestic proportions, which he made the target of a center shot, which brought the proud bird to the ground.

On investigation it proved to be a rare specimen of the golden eagle, weighing eleven pounds, and measuring six feet from tip of tip of wing.

The noble bird was in the hands of a taxidermist, and will be a fine trophy in any gunning days.

The golden eagle is not frequently found, and their cash value runs high for museum or collections.

A PLUCKY BOY.

Fred, the thirteen-year-old son of our townman, C. M. Dustin, ran across a bear while hunting near La Porte, one day last week.

He blazed away, putting a load of shot into one side of Brin's face, destroying its brains out.

The animal made a feeble effort to look refuge behind a tree. He kept on the blind side of the brute until a good opportunity enabled him to blow its brains out.

It was a young grizzly and weighed 185 pounds. Hurrah for "Grizzly Fred, of Gridley!"—(Gridley Herald.)

AN OVERTURE TALE.

B. N. Bullard, Jr., distinguished himself the other day by tomahawking a hare.

He was en route to this city from El Dorado county, in company with several gentlemen, and the party encountered a number of the long-eared "critters" in the road near Grider's. Having had a long drive, he picked up a hatchet from the wagon, and as one of the hares came within range he threw it with excellent aim, and cut the hare in two.

The hare was taking lessons of the Indians up in the mountains.—(Sacramento Bee.)

A PRETTY STIFF TALE.

Fred McCarty, an attaché of the Herald, met with a singular adventure while fishing in Three-hills slough, Sunday.

He had caught a fine bluegill, weighing probably a quarter of a pound, and was swinging it into shore when a huge pelican swooped down, grabbed the fish, and with a splash started to fly away.

The eagle proved too strong for Fred, and after a hard struggle, the bird succeeded in pulling the victim of the air to terra firma, where he speedily dispatched it with a club and got his fish.

The bird measured three feet six inches from tip of tip of wing, and weighed about nine pounds and a half.

This is one way of hunting birds, but Fred says he'd rather use a gun, as he received several severe cuts by the bird's wings before the battle terminated in his favor.

Having witnessed the scene, we can vouch for the truth of this item.—(Gridley Herald.)

GENERAL SPORTING NOTES.

Two Stockton men went out and bagged 195 doves on the 13th, and it is said that two Stockton men killed 300 in one day lately.

James H. Burnham, of Polson, returned from his mountain trip last week. He reports having had a splendid time hunting and fishing along the American river.

A few weeks ago three gentlemen shot a pigeon-mountain that Niagara Falls, on of them standing 64 yards from the traps and the other at 30 yards.

The former killed 9 out of 10 birds, and the latter 8 out of 10.

Frank Noble, of Sacramento, has sold to Judge W. S. Mesick his promising young setter pup "Rob" for $100.

The pup is of the class generally known as the English setter, and is called Laverack and Llewellyn.

The private club of San Francisco gentlemen who have leased the Salinas marshes have also purchased one of the birds belonging to the State Engineer, D. J. Darnell, which will be used for their accommodation as the duck-grounds.

A large bird of either the falcon, hawk or eagle species attacked a lady on Clay street, San Francisco, one evening last week. Her cries for help brought the neighbors, who killed the bird, which measured five feet from tip to tip.

There is a fine chance for a bear hunt in the vicinity of this city. A grizzly bear, known as "Big Bear," was shot at East Park, and is now roaming about in the vicinity of the American river, living on the fat of the land, and ing whom he may devour: Why not organize a party and go for him!

Col. Wm. Hawkins, of Chico, and party lately returned from a hunting trip to Big Meadows, Plumas county.

They killed three deer and one bear, or rather the latter was after Bruin had got him into a tight place.

Chris, Eskimo, of Polson, has been camping on the headwaters of Rubicon creek, in the Sierras. He took upward of 1000 trout from that stream, and killed eight deer during his stay.

The Tribune says it is not an uncommon thing to see a high-toned tourist alighting on the wharf at Lake Tahoe, fishing with an elaborate outfit, and with a modern conveniences, and not getting a bite, while a Plute Indian, with a bent pin, yanks the speckled beauties every few minutes.

The editor of the Dixon Tribune has been down to the tules after the porch and catfish. He says he brought home with him "the consciousness that none but a philosopher can sit on an old stump beneath the blithering rays of an August sun from morning till night, without the encouragement of an occasional bite."

Chas. B. Bamber, of Coon Hollow, when coming up from Shingle Springs, on his freight wagon last Tuesday, shot and killed a small bear, and measured seventy-four inches from tip to tip of its wings, was fifty-seven inches high, and its "true law-dance," one straight entail, contained a single digit, carried 34 inches long.—(Placerville Democrat.)

Napa Reporter: "Several local Nimrod have been distinguishing themselves in the capture of game."

On the 13th inst. a party of four, led by A. J. H. J. succeeded in capturing six of the antelope in two days' hunting. One was a fine fellow, not over 180 pounds. Four or five have been killed in the Wooden Valley canon, and about an equal number in Rag cañon at the head of the Gordon valley.

The Modern Newspaper Reporter.

San Francisco Chronicle: "The reporter who sends out manifold letters from New York devotes a portion of an epistle to the Detroit Free Press, to the disparagement of the writer of the article."

This writer, who is evidently a woman—for most of this stopwork is done by women—seeks the fact that reporters are not what they were thirty years ago, when Raymond, Greeley and Bayard Taylor served their apprenticeship. The truth is that no reporter worthy of the name was down in those days. The local news of one of the N. W. K. dailies is for the most part written up by the city editor and our assistant, where over a force of thirty men is not considered too large. The best reporters in all the large cities of the country today are better equipped for good literary work than three-quarters of the "able editors" of a generation ago. They know that news is, and when by much industry they have succeeded in getting the facts of a story they know equally well how to present it in an interesting style. To those whose knowledge of the business is purely theoretical this may seem an easy task, but anyone who has had the experience knows that it takes more ability to make a first-class reporter than to turn out the dead-end of reporting by the pen of the newspaper reporter. The reporter who would scorn rank non-sense.
